

Donald K. Hayes, MD MPH

Dr. Donald Hayes is an Epidemiologist in the Family Health Services Division at the Hawaii Department of Health returning to Hawaii in June 2007. Donald brings an innovative perspective that reflects his diverse background and training. Donald has a broad range of research interests focusing on disparate populations including topics ranging from infant mortality to chronic disease prevention. Previously, he worked in the Division for Heart Disease and Stroke Prevention at Centers for Disease Control & Prevention, obtained a Masters in Public Health degree in Epidemiology at San Diego State University, attended a Family Medicine Residency Program, obtained a MD degree from the John A Burns School of Medicine in Hawaii, and is a graduate of Punahou School. Donald will be talking today about using HHIC data to do Epidemiological research.